

THEATER MANAGER'S ROMANCE ABROAD AMATEURS IN SKITS

John Rogers at 81, of Yours Merrily Fame, Wants Wife

Theatrical Manager Who Married Minnie Palmer Advises for a Bride.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK HERALD. Copyright, 1922, by THE NEW YORK HERALD.

New York Herald Bureau, London, April 8.

John R. "Yours Merrily" Rogers, the American theatrical manager and promoter, who managed and married Minnie Palmer in the days of "My Sweetheart," is in England, casting about for another wife. Eighty-one years old, he is advertising recently for a bride, and in Aldershot, where he is staying at present, he has received 500 answers from women all offering their hand. But "Yours Merrily" is hard to suit.

His advertisement announced that he wished to be married and spend his declining years in peace, comfort and happiness. Every day the postman brings a thick batch of letters, but they are mostly from young girls, as Mr. Rogers says, "too young for me." Youth and beauty are easier to find in the matrimonial market than age and brains, he has concluded, and he admits that what he sees are age and brains.

But that may not be all there is to it. The other day he confessed that the wife he wants is Miss Jane Pearce of Bristol. He says he has proposed to her and will wait for her reply as long as he thinks she may favor him. He declares he desires no young and frivolous bride, but an "elderly, sensible woman" who will be a fit companion for a man of his years. Miss Pearce, he said, is 94.

Mr. Rogers still signs all his correspondence "Yours merrily," the vaudeville director which gave him his moniker by which he was known in the theatrical circles of America and as he is known here to-day, where he is actively engaged, having done considerable work in films. He believes the present slump in the business is attributable to the failure of managers to realize the war is over. "If they will send the wartime performers back to shoe-making and send out companies of real actors and actresses," he declares, "the slump will end immediately."

Mr. Rogers is straight and robust and looks twenty-five years younger than he admits. He tells of having gone round the world eight times and crossed the Atlantic 117 times, which, being an odd number, leaves him on this side of the ocean, where it seems likely he will remain, particularly if he has better luck in his quest for age and brains.

Says Da Vinci First Used 'America' on Map

Who was the first geographer to give the name of America to the new world? This question has been the subject of innumerable controversies, says Le Petit Parisien, Paris, Nov. Prof. W. H. Herington, as a result of personal research of an exacting nature covering an extended period, declares that the prior claim belongs to Leonardo da Vinci.

In 1507, after the death of Christopher Columbus, says Prof. Herington, a man named Martin Waldseemüller published a book demanding that the new continent, visited four times by America Vesputius, should bear that navigator's name.

The first map of the continent discovered by Columbus, printed at Rome in 1508, bore only the title "New World." So did a second map published in Strasbourg in 1509. And it was the map drawn in 1514 by Leonardo da Vinci which for the first time bore the name "America."

Miss Helen Meany, Olympic swimmer and diver, has resumed her studies in Putnam Hall, Foughkean road. She is preparing for Vassar College.

Morals in Colleges High, Declares Pastor

LIBERAL, KAN., March 28.—Morality among students in colleges is higher than in any other group of corresponding numbers, according to a statement made at the annual Southwestern Kansas Conference by the Rev. Warren P. Sheldon of the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, after an extensive investigation of moral conditions in more than 100 private and State universities of this country.

"A great deal has been said about the present low moral standards of college students to-day," said Dr. Sheldon. "But investigation does not confirm the general impression. We have been impressed with the high moral standard of college students after investigation of this very thing. Two or three rows of students attract more attention and make more noise than 500 quiet, diligent men about them. There is a small percentage of young men in every college who live riotous lives and often give the whole college student class a bad name."
